  - b. able to be made or achieved.
  - c. extremely difficult to deal with or solve
  - d. easily upset by the things people say or do

By nine o’clock in the morning, the streets are lined with people. Somewhere in the distance, a band is heard playing a marching song. Shopkeepers are looking their doors and joining the crowds. Everyone is craning their necks to see how long it will be before the first float reaches them.

77. What is the closest meaning to the phrase “craning their necks” (line 3) mean?
- a. sitting on other people’s necks to see things far away clearer
  - b. hiding their necks to be saved from the floating people
  - c. lifting and moving heavy objects out of their way
  - d. stretching their necks in order to look at something.

Immunization can significantly reduce the microorganisms thought to cause cavities. The Federal Drug Administration needs to approve the vaccine before it can be sold to the public. Consequently, the vaccine will have to undergo a three-year trial period.

78. Which can replace the word “approve” (line 2)?
- a. experience
  - b. accept.
  - c. make different
  - d. connect

Facts and ideas of science have many uses. They help us to know the “how” of nature and they help us to solve practical problem. Medicine, farming, engineering, transportation, communication, photography, and many other fields depend on the ideas of science.

Scientific inventions help us in learning more about our surroundings. Microscopes, telescope, lasers, and space satellites help us by extending one or more of our senses. They let us observe things which we could not observe with our senses alone. For instance, the microscope enables us to see things too small to be seen with the unaided eye.

Directions: Read the following passage and answer the questions.

People use social networking sites because they are “fun.” They help us connect with friends. They give us interesting information. They make us happy. Right? Well, maybe not. I recently read a magazine article about social networking sites. The article says that they can actually make people feel angry and frustrated. I think the article is right. People usually post happy things – photo of parties, vacations, friends and family. But sometimes I’m at home studying, and I look at the posts and feel bad. I think, “All my friends are happy. But I’m bored. What’s wrong with me?” Or sometimes I post a photo, and only two people comment on it, so I think people don’t like me. I know it’s silly to feel this way. Do other people have this problem?

91. What should be the title of this article?

- a. My Experience on Social Networking Sites
- b. My Views on Social Networking Sites.
- c. Social Networking Sites are Fun.
- d. Social Networking Sites are Useful.

- b. The author doesn't have any friends
- c. The author has problems about social network.
- d. Social networking sites always make the author feel happy

Directions: Read the following passage and answer the questions.

Akira Kurosawa was a great movie director. He (1) was born in Tokyo in 1910. He studied art, but worked in film to make money. In 1936 he got a job as assistant movie director, and five years later he became a director. In his 57-year career, Kurosawa directed 30 films. In 1950, he directed the movie "Rashomon." It (2) won first prize at the Venice Film Festival. In 1990, Kurosawa won an Oscar.

Why was Kurosawa a great director? One reason is that he wanted every detail in his films to be perfect. The actors in his historical movies wore their costumes for several weeks before they filmed because he (3) didn't want them (4) to look new.

Many other movie directors admire Kurosawa. Directors Francis Ford Coppola, Steven Spielberg, and Martin Scorsese are all Kurosawa fans. They (5) admire Kurosawa because he made wonderful films, and because he was a teacher for younger directors.
